TUSCOLA LODGE NO. 332

ANCIENT FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS

Oct. 2 - 1860

100 YEARS OF MASONRY IN TUSCOLA, ILLINOIS . . .

Freemasonry has been a force for peace and harmony in the world for many centuries and in Tuscola, Illinois, for one century.

Based as it is on the ingenuity of man, as displayed in the building of King Solomon's Temple, ancient truths are transmitted and related to the present day.

Tools of the active stone mason are used to illustrate many of the Masonic lectures and discourses, resulting in a keener perception among members of the tenets of the institution.

Freemasonry is an individual matter with each member. To one, it may be a part of a full community life. In another, it may represent and serve his entire religious experience. To still others, the significance may assume various levels of importance.

In all cases, an improvement of the individual accrues, resulting in a betterment of the community and a favorable opinion of the Masonic fraternity among those who observe from the sidelines.

The benefit has been the same in Tuscola as it has been throughout the globe and an examination of the events of the past 100 years will serve not only to bear this out, but also may point the way to greater accomplishments in the future.

UNDER DISPENSATION . . .

The first Masonic lodge was convened in Tuscola on March 5, 1860, under dispensation from Ira A. W. Buck, the Grand Master of Illinois. James Davis, a member of the firm of Davis and Finney, grain merchants, was appointed to serve as the first worshipful master.

Ira A. W. Buck, Grand Master of Illinois in 1860, when Tuscola Lodge No. 332, AF&AM, was instituted.

The need for the lodge was shown by an immediate interest by leading citizens of the town. On May 10 next, the lodge minutes reported the reading of three petitions, the making of two favorable and one unfavorable report, the election of two petitioners and the rejection of one, the conferring of two entered apprentice degrees and two fellowcraft degrees.

The first three petitioners to receive the degrees of Masonry in Tuscola were H. J. Bassett, S. B. Logan and William F. French, being initiated in the months of March, April and June of that year.

The charter members of the lodge, instituted in November, 1860 as Tuscola Lodge No. 332, AF&AM, were James Davis, John McGinnis, Alfred H. Butler, J. W. McKinney, John Sloan, William Chandler, J. C. Parcels, F. F. Nesbit, S. H. Alcock, J. C. Long, Joseph G. Cannon, E. S. Crawley, John N. Jackson, W. H. Russell and S. G. Bassett.

Douglas County was but a year old when the lodge was formed, having been detached from Coles County by legislative action in 1859. Tuscola, its county seat and the site of this, the first Masonic organization in the county, was but three years old.

In the years that have followed, hundreds of men of both high and low estate have received the degrees of Masonry and have learned the ritualistic lectures and in turn have passed them on to subsequent members.

While many members have attained wide prominence, both in and out of Masonic circles, none became so universally known as Joseph G. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who entered politics as Douglas County's first state's attorney.

He had received the degrees of Masonry at Shelbyville in 1858 and came to Tuscola as a young attorney in 1859. He was elected to the House of Representatives in 1873 and with the exception of two terms, served in Congress for 50 years. He was speaker of the House from 1903 to 1911.

As a charter member, his name was on many of the first petitions to be read in the lodge. He also rose to the office of senior warden before his political activities began to demand too much of his time.

James Davis, the first worshipful master, came to Tuscola from his native Parke County, Indiana, in 1857 and was successful in the grain business. He was elected mayor of Tuscola in 1882.

Joseph G. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who attained great prominence as a statesman, was a charter member of Tuscola lodge and rose to the office of senior warden before his time was taken over by his career.

INTER-LODGE RELATIONS . . .

Tuscola lodge had been chartered but a short time when it was asked to recommend a lodge at Arcola. This recommendation was forthcoming in January, 1861.

A lodge was recommended at Camargo on November 10, 1864 and at Villa Grove in 1904. A recommendation was also granted for a lodge at Unity in Piatt County but present day maps do not show this locality.

The lodge was notified on February 9, 1877 of the removal of Center State lodge from Mackville to Atwood.

The relations with neighboring lodges have always been cordial.

EARLY FINANCES . . .

Tuscola Lodge No. 332 began life with a debt of $348.20. Some of this was financed by the issuance of $150 in stock. The debt was retired in due time and by 1866, there was a surplus of $366 in cash on hand.

LODGE HOMES . . .

From 1860 until 1870, the lodge met on the second floor of a frame building located on the south side of W. S. Central avenue and near Washington street. Early purchases for the hall included a quantity of lumber, candles, a lamp to suspend above the altar, $6.50 for a master's carpet, and $1 for a half cord of wood.

In 1866, $69.20 was spent for jewels, and repairs in the amount of $238 was authorized.

From time to time, other quarters were investigated but none were acted upon until 1870 when spacious quarters in the Wyeth, Cannon and Co. (or Commercial) Block were occupied.

Uncle Joe Cannon first offered the rooms to the lodge on December 27, 1869 in behalf of the owners, a private banking concern that later became the First National Bank of Tuscola.

The purchase price was $3000. The owners donated $500 and Caleb Garrett $250. Other gifts brought the total to $1000. The Royal Arch Chapter, which had been formed in 1867, agreed to pay half the cost of the hall. Melita Commandery, which was convened in 1870, was given a year's free rent.

The Commercial Block was located on the approximate present site of the Tuscola Community building. It was indeed an imposing structure. The ground floor was occupied by five business houses, including the banking firm. The second floor contained a theatre seating 800 people and its stage was fitted with curtains, backdrop and scenery in the latest mode of the day.

The Masonic hall was located on the third floor and was described in early prints as one of the finest in the state.

The old hall was sold to James Newlan for $350.

John Ervin headed a committee on the dedication of the new hall and this was carried out on May 3, 1870 by H. G. Reynolds, grand master.

The lodge's third home on W. S. Central avenue. Lodge was held here from 1874 until 1900. It was located on the site of the present McCumber building.

The last meeting was held in this hall on March 6, 1873. On March 11, a fire started by exploding gun powder in a grocery store at the west end of Sale street. A total of 30 buildings at the west end of Sale street and Central avenue were destroyed, including the Commercial Block. The loss was estimated at $150,000.

The IOOF hall was used by the lodge until the following year when rooms were rented and outfitted in the Coleman Bright building on W. S. Central avenue on the approximate location of the present McCumber building.

This was the lodge home until 1900 when the trustees entered into an agreement with Roy Helm, acquiring "sky rights" to build a third story on top of his building at 126 W. Sale street.

The hall cost a total of $4500 with Tuscola lodge and Chapter assuming one-fourth each and Commandery one-half.

The Masonic bodies owned half of the second floor stairway and all of that to the third floor, and was bound to keep the roof in good repair.

The next and last move of the lodge was in 1937 to the building at 107 N. Main street. This hall was acquired from the Knights of Pythias lodge by Gus Flesor, operator of Tuscola Kandy Kitchen, and a long time Masonic worker.

In turn, Mr. Flesor gave the second story half of the building to the lodge, free of conditions or obligations, for as long as it is needed for Masonic purposes.

OTHERS USE QUARTERS . . .

A number of groups have used the various Masonic halls. The Episcopal Church, no longer in existence in Tuscola, was the first outside group to use the original hall.

Home of the lodge from 1900 until 1937. Permission was obtained from Roy Helm to add a third story to the building for lodge purposes.

Later the Good Templars, an early temperance group, were tenants of the lodge, as were the IOOF, the Knights of Pythias and the Royal Neighbors of America.

In recent years, the Masonic hall has been managed by a joint group known as the Temple Board of Managers. The various bodies, including the Blue Lodge, Royal Arch Chapter, Melita Commandery, and Order of the Eastern Star, share the cost of maintaining the property.

The use of the hall by the Order of DeMolay, and Rainbow For Girls is welcomed by the various groups.

MODERNIZATION . . .

The lodge physical property, through the years, has reflected some of the developments of modern times. Electric lights were installed in the hall being used in 1891, and in 1896, a telephone was put in for the use of members.

City heat was added in 1902 but this was later discontinued. Coal heat was used until 1945, when natural gas service became available.

MASONIC CUSTOMS . . .

Tuscola Lodge No. 332 was organized at a time when the surrounding area was open territory and the brethren felt the need of banding together, not only for survival but for social reasons as well.

It was before the miracle drugs and many illnesses that now readily respond to treatment were prolonged or fatal. Many people were subject to malaria, then thought to be caused by the air coming off the swampy areas of the prairie.

Traditionally, the members were ready and willing to aid their brethren and many long nights were spent with ailing brothers. Often, the lodge paid members to serve as nurses for the sick. Too, payments were made to aid the families of those distressed.

In case of death, the lodge members made themselves available to the bereaved family. Usually, a Lodge of Sorrow was convened and the brethren would go to the home of the deceased brother and take charge of his re-

After the burial, a resolution of eulogy was adopted and ordered published, at first in the Douglas County Shield and the Tuscola Union, and later in the Tuscola Journal and the Tuscola Review, when these newspapers came into being.

The lodge officiated at the first burial in Tuscola cemetery on October 30, 1861 when the remains of Albert G. Coffin were taken from the first burial ground, near the corner of Indiana and South Line street, and committed in full ritualistic form to a grave in the newly organized cemetery.

In 1866, the lodge aided one William Rogers, who died of injuries here, after having fallen or been thrown from an Illinois Central sleeping car. The lodge saw to his care until his death a few days later and then aided his wife, after taking care of the burial rites.

For many years, the lodge owned title to lots in the local cemetery as well as coffins for use in case of death to any of the brothers.

PUBLIC CEREMONIES . . .

All of the lodge appearances were not as gloomy as this, however. On December 27, 1865, the Tuscola Brass Band, led by Henry C. Niles, Douglas County's first surveyor, was hired to lead a parade to the Methodist church, where the officers were installed in a public ceremony.

An address, given at that time by S. T. Callaway, was ordered published in the Tuscola Union.

CORNERSTONE LAYING . . .

Cornerstone laying was another public ceremony for which the lodge was particularly suited. William H. Lamb, worshipful master, presided at an early ceremony on June 26, 1870, when the cornerstone of the Tuscola Union school was laid. Many early historical articles and relics were placed in the stone.

Some of the articles were recovered in 1922, after the fire that destroyed the building and in turn placed in the cornerstone of what is now known as the South Ward school. The lodge also officiated at this ceremony. And this seems to be the last cornerstone laying of consequence of which the lodge was in charge.

Another early ceremony for the lodge was the laying of the cornerstone of the First Christian church. This took place September 8, 1892. The local officials acted under a dispensation from the Grand Lodge.

The lodge participated in the cornerstone laying at the Sullivan Masonic home on June 24, 1902 and was invited the same year to place articles in the cornerstones of the First Presbyterian Church and the Tuscola Public Library.

The laying of the cornerstone of the present Douglas County court house on November 16, 1911 was probably the lodge's most colorful ceremony. The Illinois grand master, Delmar D. Darrah, personally officiated at this rite.

A close-up of the cornerstone, as it appears today. The stone contains many relics and documents of the day.

STRICT DISCIPLINARIAN . . .

In the earlier years of the Tuscola fraternity, the lodge also performed the function of strict disciplinarian whenever any of the members got out of line. Charges of un-Masonic conduct would be preferred, attorneys appointed and a trial held. If found guilty, the punishment was usually suspension or expulsion.

Once a deputy sheriff was tried, after letting two prisoners escape without sounding an alarm. In 1867, one brother charged another with permitting his hogs to damage his property. Uncle Joe Cannon was counsel for the defense and secured an acquittal.

RECOMMEND FESTIVAL . . .

A communication from the Grand Master on April 24, 1866, discussed the end of the Civil War. He called for harmony among the brethren of both the North and the South and asked that a festival be held on June 24 of that year to celebrate the peace that had come.

The willingness of the brethren to forget the past was shown a little later when $25 was voted to be sent to the aid of suffering brethren in the South.

FREEMASONRY IN WAR . . .

The Masonic fraternity has always shown a willingness to serve in times of emergency. The lodge has frequently given freely in time and substance to aid others in case of need.

Individually, members have served personally with distinction.

The Tuscola lodge had been meeting but a year when the Civil War began. Derrick Lamb, captain; W. H. Lamb, adjutant; and Wesford Taggart, lieutenant colonel, were among the early lodge members who helped in organizing units for service in this War. Many other Tuscola members served in this conflict.

War times are always busy times for Masonic lodges. Special meetings are often called to confer degrees upon servicemen who may be at home briefly on furlough. No doubt, such occasions had much to do with the lodge's extensive activities during the first few years of its existence.

Returning servicemen also tend to seek the brotherhood of Masonry in adjustment to peaceful pursuits after a serious conflict. This was found to be the case after all of the nation's wars of the past century.

WORLD WAR I . . .

The Tuscola lodge was especially sensitive to the conditions prevailing during World War I. J. L. Bundy, Sr. and Arthur H. Johnson were among those who received the degrees of the order under emergency conditions.

A roll of honor was placed in the hall on January 24, 1918 and a service flag hung on April 22, 1920.

The grand lodge established two funds for war aid and the local members contributed liberally to these causes.

On June 27, 1918, the lodge gave $25 to the North Douglas chapter of the Red Cross to purchase comfort kits for soldier boys in service.

The grand lodge on July 25, 1918, issued an edict praising the loyalty demonstrated by the nine German language lodges in the state. However, it was ordered that the English language only be used, as soon as the officers became proficient in this tongue and not later than January, 1919.

A card was received November 12, 1919, indicating that J. M. Hawkins had visited the Washington-Lafayette Masonic club in France.

The influenza epidemic that followed this war had its effect as the lodge meetings of October, November and December 1918 were not held, on recommendation of the state board of health.

FUND REVIVED . . .

The Masonic Service Fund was revived in 1941 for World War II and again in 1951, during the Korean Conflict. On January 8, 1942, the lodge made a substantial investment in defense bonds.

On March 26, 1942, Dainen Arthur was recognized as the first brother to enter service in World War II.

A committee was named May 24, 1945 to welcome brothers home from the war. A sum of $25 was given to the American Legion Memorial fund.

MASONIC DONATIONS . . .

The lodge has given donations to a number of outside interests. Assistance to distressed brethren in the South after the Civil War has already been reported.

On May 10, 1910, $15 was sent to aid the distressed in the San Francisco earthquake.

A donation of $150 was made June 24, 1920 for life membership in the George Washington Memorial at Alexandria, Virginia.

On February 25, 1936, $100 was sent for flood relief in the Ohio River Valley.

GIFTS RECEIVED . . .

The lodge has received a number of significant gifts. In 1922, Frank Smith gave the lodge a gavel, made from wood grown on the farm of George Washington. Harry Woodworth gave the lodge an electric letter "G" in 1926 and two years later presented marble plates for use on the officer pedestals.

In 1936, the home on the northwest corner of S. Main and Van Allen streets was left to the lodge under the will of A. W. Wallace. The following year, the home was sold to Fred D. Michener for $3000.

Of course, the gift of the present lodge home on September 23, 1937 by Gus Flesor has been one of the most substantial gifts and has earned the continuing thanks of all the local Masonic bodies.

MASONIC FESTIVITIES . . .

The serving of refreshments after Masonic labor has been a time honored custom. The serving of oyster suppers dates back to the earliest days of the lodge and is still popular today.

The holding of picnics was a custom for many decades but has occurred less frequently in recent years.

The need for economy was demonstrated during the depression when it was decided that refreshments would be served only following Master Mason degrees.

In regard to festivities, the lodge was always on the side of temperance as shown by a Grand Lodge edict of November 14, 1912, which forbade smoking in the lodge hall during ceremonies.

MASONIC AWARDS . . .

Masonic awards given on the local level include the Past Master's Pin and Pins for 25 and 50 years of membership.

The first past master's pin was presented to Don W. Tuttle in 1941.

Fifty year pins were first secured in 1933 and the first one was presented to Joshua S. Cambridge on October 12 of that year.

The first 25 year pins were awarded on April 28, 1949 at which time 98 members were eligible and 48 were present to receive them in person.

The first Past Master's night was held on February 3, 1921. This observance is now held each year with past masters traditionally conferring a Master Mason degree.

The 25 and 50 year pins are now presented on these occasions.

GRAND MASTER VISITS . . .

The visits of Grand Masters to the Tuscola lodge have indeed been rare but exceedingly noteworthy. A visit of particular note was the laying of the court house cornerstone in 1911 by Delmar D. Darrah, then grand master, and one of Illinois' most illustrious Masons.

However, this was a grand lodge ceremony and the proceedings are not shown in the Tuscola lodge minutes.

On the occasion of the lodge's 75th anniversary, November 29, 1935, Grand Master Hal C. McCloud, was in attendance and was received in suitable ceremonies.

Grand Master Everett T. Lawrence was a guest of the lodge on January 9, 1939 and at that time presented a 50 year pin to R. J. N. Johnson, one of the lodge's most faithful members. Mr. Johnson died in June of that year.

On the occasion of his visit to the lodge on April 28, 1949, Grand Master Fred Mills officiated at the presentation of the first 25 year pins. His presence here meant the realization of a lifelong ambition of Burl H. Mills, then worshipful master, to serve as the host master to the head of the fraternity.

FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE . . .

During the past century, the lodge has been blessed with long and distinguished service on the part of many members.

Of particular note was the service of W. H. Lamb, who was master of the lodge a total of ten years. Cornelius Bye served as master for seven years, the first occasion being in 1864 and the last in 1905.

James Davis, the first master, was head of the lodge for four years.

Worshipful masters with three years service were W. F. Bromfield, P. C. Sloan, R. J. N. Johnson, J. W. Kagey, C. A. Hawkins and Fred L. Renner.

H. Brooks Bowles was secretary of the lodge for the 20 years from 1928 to 1948.

Isaac D. Urquhart had served as treasurer for a similar period at the time of his death in 1942.

Eli Murphey was elected treasurer at that time and has served continuously in this capacity up to the present time.

LOCAL GRAND OFFICERS . . .

Caleb G. Stovall was the first local member to be honored with a grand lodge office, that of sword bearer, in 1912.

George M. Seip was elected in 1932 and served as grand sentinel of Royal Arch Masons.

Claude J. Hoel was made a grand lecturer in 1930.

Fred L. Renner became a grand lecturer in 1928 and gave instruction in the Tuscola lodge in this capacity the first time on February 20 of the following year.

He also served as district deputy grand master from 1932 to 1940, and 1950 to 1957.

He had replaced Charles A. Hawkins in this post. Mr. Hawkins had so served from 1920 until his death on February 13, 1932.

At the present time, the Tuscola lodge boasts four grand lecturers. In addition to Brother Renner, they are Clyde J. Colwell, James Feeler and Burl H. Mills, who qualified for this honor in 1952.

YORK CROSS OF HONOR . . .

The lodge takes pride in two members being the recipients of the York Cross of Honor, which is awarded only to those who have headed all the York Rite Masonic bodies. Frank Marler received this honor in 1958, and Burl H. Mills was similarly honored this year, 1960.

MISCELLANY . . .

The problem of ventilating the lodge hall in the summer months has been one of long standing, a committee first having been appointed to deal with the matter on July 11, 1867.

The Tuscola lodge was not the only local organization to have been made homeless by fire. The Knights of Pythias lost their quarters in 1906, when their Castle hall burned.

The grand lodge issued a directive December 27, 1923, forbidding the lodges of the state to hold raffles, drawings or similar events.

John J. Richeson was paid $5 to speak at the cornerstone laying of the South Ward school.

The lodge was a regular donor to the Christmas Fund of the LaGrange Orphans home.

A lodge of foreign jurisdiction was present in Tuscola on November 20, 1947, when Parke County Lodge No. 8 of Rockville, Indiana, conferred a Master Mason degree in the form of the grand lodge of Indiana. Later, a local group returned the compliment for the Rockville lodge.

The outside Masonic electric sign was a gift to the lodge of the Tuscola Chapter, Order of DeMolay. It was given to the lodge on July 12, 1951.

The illuminated emblem which informs the wayfarer of the presence of a Masonic Lodge, by night, as well as by day, was presented to the lodge by the Order of DeMolay on July 12, 1951.

THE MASONIC DEGREES . . .

The Entered Apprentice is the first degree of Masonry. It is likened to the beginner in any enterprise, who must first confine his efforts to the ruder and heavier tasks of labor.

The second degree, or Fellowcraft, represents the period when the worker has acquired some basic skills but still is not qualified for full responsibility.

The Master Mason, or third degree, signifies a complete qualification for the work at hand, be it physical, mental or spiritual, together with the means of identification that prove these abilities.

THE 1950'S . . .

In the early 1950's, there came to the Tuscola area a vast crew of men to engage in the fabrication and erection of a vast chemical plant.

The occasion was remindful of the Biblical days of Solomon's Temple when Masonic craftsmen from far off places came to ply their trade on that great edifice.

It had a parallel, too, in the Europe of the Middle Ages, when the forebears of the modern Masonic order made their way from one project to another in the building of the great cathedrals that still excite the wonder of man.

While the implements and materials were different, the relationship was clear.

Many of the workmen, sensing this relationship, united with the local lodge. On many other occasions, the Tuscola lodge conferred degrees on craftsmen at the request of lodges of farflung foreign jurisdiction.

Some of the workmen established permanent homes here and it is interesting to note that the present worshipful master, James L. Brothers, III, was such a workman, brought here by the opportunity of working on this vast installation.

At the same time, the Tuscola lodge found itself to be in a growing and expanding community. The officers and members have risen to the occasion admirably and have shouldered a full share of the responsibilities and duties at hand.

Faithful laborers in the Temple: Front, Melvin Yost, junior deacon; Fred Renner, tyler; Myron Pangburn, marshal. Rear, W. V. Rubart, John Finley, and Willis Jolley, all past masters.

The past 100 years have brought a great deal of change to Tuscola. The coming of electricity, the telephone, the motor car, the airplane, radio and television have eliminated many of the hardships of the earlier life and have greatly increased the speed of communication and travel.

Under the circumstances, freemasonry was bound to undergo some change. However, the underlying principles remain the same. The fact that the Masonic lodge endured while many other groups fell by the wayside, is assurance that the fraternity will continue as a force for good in the world.

On the surface, the activities of the lodge are less spectacular than those of an earlier day. However, the need for the guidance of its teachings are as critical as they ever were.

While life today may be less rigorous and hazardous than of yore, it is more hurried and of great complexity. It provides not only the challenge but also the opportunity for greater service and accomplishment than ever was the case before.

If the past can be considered a criterion, there is full assurance that the fraternity will rise to all the occasions that will be encountered in the days to come.
